Course Goals or Overview:	This course is designed to serve as an introduction to economic principles that can help explain the actions of individuals around us, and even ourselves. Principles will focus on how people respond to monetary and non-monetary costs, how prices respond to changes in the availability of resources, and how we can use this knowledge to objectively examine public policy.
Learning Objectives/Outcomes:	At the end of this course, the student should
1	Demonstrate a basic understanding of the implications of the “economic problems”
2	Demonstrate a basic understanding of demand and supply analysis and be able to use the technique to analyze economic problems.

3	Understand the theory of the consumer and the firm
4	Understand the different models of market structure
5	Demonstrate a basic understanding of the implications of the “Micro-economic problems”
